

INTRODUCTION

The following question(s) were submitted by interested parties through email (delivered to MDPSC-NGEA-Storage@poweradvisoryllc.com). Some questions have been slightly modified for clarity. Answers were originally posted to the Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) webpage of the NGEA RFA website.

Q&A

- Q1. The Next Generation Energy Act indicates that Applicants will need to complete their own benefit-cost analysis (BCA) as part of the submission requirements. Is this a requirement of the Request for Applications?

To ensure that CBAs employ consistent assumptions and reliably reflect the relative value offered by Applications, the RFA Administrator will be conducting a benefit-cost analysis on all Applications deemed administratively complete. Applicants do not need to submit their own cost-benefit analysis as part of the submission requirements.